INTERNATIONAL SOCIAL SCIENCE JOURNAL

Vol. XXXVI, 1984
Nos. 99–102

SUBJECT AND AUTHOR INDEX

Subjects

African proletariat, in industrial employment 341–354
Agriculture, labour relations in Soviet 285–297
Anthropology, comparative study on teaching of 713–723
Bilingual education and social conflict in Mexico 113–128
China, participation and industrial democracy, comparative trends in Europe and 299–318
Colombia, effects of emigration and return 453–467
Commodification of social sciences 615–625
Creole, Portuguese dialects in West Africa 77–85
Decision-making and employee participation 217–232 Democracy,
future of industrial 233–254
industrial, in China and Europe 299–318 work 195–215
Development research and social sciences in India 673–697
Economists, French, (1758–1910) 551–560
Emigration and return, effects on sending countries, case of Colombia 453–467
Europe, participation and industrial democracy, comparative trends in China and 299–318
France, institutionalization of sociology 643–655
French economists, from amateur to established science (1758–1910) 551–560
Geography, in late twentieth century 657–672
Georgian folk-singing 537–549
Hebrew, spread of modern 87–112
Household, and industrialization 319–339
Immigrant-receiving countries, adaptation and conflict 519–536
Immigrant workers in the labour market 501–518
India, development research 673–694
participation in 255–269 Industrial,
democracy, the future of 233–254
democracy and participation in China and Europe 299–318 employment and African proletariat 341–354
Industrialization and the household 319–339
International migration, in a changing world 409–423
linkages with internal migration in Africa 441–452 prospects of 425–440
International organizations, language problem 143–155
International relations and social sciences 627–642

Japanese trade-unionism 271–283
Labour relations in Soviet agriculture 285–297
Language, in society 5–20
modernization in developing world 169–188 problem in international organizations 143–155 spread, case of modern Hebrew 87–112 teaching and sociolinguistics 157–167
Mexico, bilingual education and social conflict, Otomi Indians 113–128 Migrants,
children of, in Western Europe 487–500
rural, in Soviet cities 469–485
Migration,
African situation 441–452
international, in a changing world 409–423 prospects of international 425–440
One-language societies, linguistic variations in 129–142
Oral and literate traditions 41–57
Participation,
in China and Europe, in industrial democracy trends 299–318 employee, in decision-making 217–232 in Indian society 255–269
in organizations 355–366
Portuguese Creole dialects in West Africa 77–85
Regional science, evolution over thirty years 699–712
Scientific method in social science and philosophical schools 587–601
Scientific status of social sciences 567–586
Social organization, and textual mediation 59–75
Social sciences,
commodification of 615–625
in India, and development research 673–697 philosophical schools and scientific working methods in 587–601 scientific status of 567–586 study of international relations and 627–642 Socio-economic statistical series, a survey in South Asian countries 369–402 Sociolinguistics, and language teaching 157–167
and social progress 21–39
Sociology,
in France, institutionalization of 643–655
in Soviet Union, relating to rural migrants in cities 469–485
South Asian countries, a survey on main socio-economic statistical series 369–402 Soviet,
labour relations in agriculture 285–297
sociology on rural migrants into cities 469–485
Trade-unionism, Japanese 271–283
Traditions, oral and literate 41–57
Value as a factor in social action 603–613
West Africa, Portuguese creole dialects 77–85
Work democracy 195–215

Authors

ADEPOJU, Aderanti. Linkages between internal and international migration: the African situation 441–452
AKE, Claude. Commodification of the social sciences 615–625
BENKO, G. B. Regional science: evolution over thirty years 699–712 BLYTON, Paul. Some old and new problems in employee participation in decision-making 217–232

BRAILLARD, Philippe. The social sciences and the study of international relations 627–642
BURKE III, Edmund. The institutionalization of sociology in France: its social and political significance 643–655
CABRAL, Nelson E. Portuguese Creole dialects in West Africa 77–85
CASTAÑO, Gabriel Murillo. Effects of emigration and return on sending countries: the case of Colombia 453–467
CHAUDHURI, K. K. Participation in Indian society 255–269
COOPER, Robert L. A framework for the description of language spread: the case of modern Hebrew 87–112
DESHERIEV, Yunus D. Social progress and sociolinguistics 21–39
GELLNER, Ernest. The scientific status of the social sciences 567–586
GÖKALP, Altan. Migrants' children in Western Europe: differentiated socialization and multicultural problems 487–500
HAMEL, Rainer Enrique. Sociocultural conflict and bilingual education: the case of the Otomi Indians in Mexico 113–128 HARTUNG, Wolfdietrich. Some aspects of linguistic variation in one-language societies 129–142
HEATH, Shirley Brice. Oral and literate traditions 41–57
HUMBLET, Jean-E. The language problem in international organizations 143–155
ISHIKAWA, Akihiro. Japanese trade-unionism in a changing environment 271–283
KARUNATILAKE, H. N. S. Main socio-economic statistical series of South Asian countries: a critical survey 369–402
KEARNEY, Marie-Louise. Socio-linguistics and language teaching 157–167
KHUBCHANDANI, Lachman M. Language modernization in the developing world 169–188
KOEN, Vincent. From amateur science to established science: the case of the French economists (1758–1910) 551–560
KOZYR, M. I. New features of labour relations in Soviet agriculture 285–297
LAAKSONEN, Oiva. Participation down and up the line: comparative industrial democracy trends in China and Europe 299–318
LINGE, G. J. R. Industrialization and the household 319–339
LOMBARD, Jacques. The teaching of anthropology: a comparative study 713–723
LUCKMANN, Thomas. Language in society 5–20
MARSHALL, Adriana. Immigrant workers in the labour market: a comparative analysis 501–518
NOWAK, Stefan. Philosophical schools and scientific working methods in social science 587–601
OGUNBAMERU, O. A. The African proletariat in industrial employment: a reappraisal 341–354
PAPADEMETRIOU, Demetrios G. International migration in a changing world 409–423
QUITO, Emerita S. Value as a factor in social action 603–613
RICHMOND, Anthony H. Sociocultural adaptation and conflict in immigrant-receiving countries 519–536
RUS, Velko. The future of industrial democracy 233–254
SANTOS, Milton. Geography in the late twentieth century: new roles for a threatened discipline 657–672 SATHYAMURTHY, T. V. Development research and the social sciences in India 673–697

SMITH, Dorothy E. Textually mediated social organization 59–75
SPINRAD, William. Work democracy: an overview 195–215
TABBARAH, Riad. Prospects of international migration 425–440
WILPERT, Bernhard. Participation in organizations: evidence from international comparative research 355–366
YANITSKY, Oleg ; ZAIONCHKOVSKAYA, Zhanna. Soviet sociology relating to rural migrants in cities 469–485
ZAIONCHKOVSKAYA, Zhanna ; YANITSKY, Oleg. Soviet sociology relating to rural migrants in cities 469–485 ZHORDANIA, Josif. Georgian folk-singing: its source, emergence and modern development 537–549